"Gypsy Rose Lee, famous strip teasee, is the latest public figure to have a finger pointed at her as subversive." A little while back it was Jean Muir, movie and television actress.

For some time now the country has been legitimately alarmed over the Communists in its midst. Congress at this moment is trying to work out legislation to give us protection against them. The House-approved Wood bill stresses the need to strip away false fronts and label Communists and their organizations for what they are.

Even if the government were to conduct this labeling process, as it would under the Wood bill, there'd always be great risk of besmirching innocent people and groups. That risk explains the determined opposition to the plan by many in Congress.

But if private individuals and organizations join in the labeling, the danger of hurting innocent folk is far greater. Rumor, fragments of truth, falsehood, all may be seized upon to smear a person in these frenzied times. As we all know, the original always catches the most newspaper space; the denial, even when it represents the real truth, is usually relegated to inside pages.

In Miss Muir's case, private individuals objected to her appearance on a TV show. They based their protests on the fact her name was included in a booklet called "Red Channels," the report of a private anti-Communist group on the alleged influence of Reds and sympathizers in Radio and TV.

Miss Muir was said to belong to several organizations listed by the government as subversive. She denied membership in some, admitted it in others, but said she nevertheless had no communist leanings. In fact, she said she hated communism.

As for Gypsy Rose Lee, she was similarly listed by "Red Channels." This time it was the Illinois branch of the American Legion that publicly called her a "dear" and close associate of traitors to this country. Miss Lee also denied the charges.

The critical facts about both these individuals can't be properly weighed without a complete and fair inquiry into their activities and thinking.

And we would like to suggest that it is not the business of Counterattack, the group which produced "Red Channels," to conduct American Legion to conduct such an investigation. Nor is it the function of any irate person who might pick up a telephone and complain to a broadcasting company.

Obviously, in these nervous days, any charge of communism can seriously affect an individual's entire future as a U.S. citizen. Miss Muir, for instance, was fired immediately from her TV job. Miss Lee may have trouble, too.

Suppose they are both completely innocent of the charges? Who in America would care to have this happen to him if he also were innocent.

Measuring the loyalty of its citizens should be a government monopoly. Any anti-Communist legislation adopted by Congress should provide machinery for the testing of that loyalty whenever and however it is called into question. A thorough impartial study by a publicly-appointed body should be made in every such case. In each instance, the information private hands have gathered should be given quietly to the government board.

That way, innocent people will be protected from public smearing.

If they are not, then the labeling process will be destructive of the very freedoms we are trying to preserve.

Pioneer Hope Woman Dies at Age of 85

Mrs. Lenora Jones Carrigan, aged 85, widow of the late Steve Carrigan, died at 10:50 a.m. today in a Hope hospital. She had been an invalid for the past 3½ years. She was the daughter of the late United States Senator J. K. Jones.

Mrs. Carrigan was a pioneer of Hope having moved here from Washington when she married in 1884. She was born in Delark, Clark County but moved to Washington when she was a young girl.

She was widely known and active in civic affairs until recent years. In 1892 she moved her letter to the First Methodist Church of Hope and was one of its oldest members at the time of her death.

Survivors include two daughters, Mrs. Lillian C. Routon and Mrs. F. S. McDavid of Hope, three grandchildren, Mrs. Roy Prather of Little Rock, Mrs. James C. Cross of Arlington, Va., and William Routon of Hope.

Active pallbearers are: Carter Johnson, Dr. F. D. Henry, Lloyd Spencer, R. L. Broach, Chester Lester, Kline Snyder, Robert Wilson, N. T. Jewell, Terrell Cornelius.

Funeral services will be held at the residence at 320 W. Ave B, at 3 p.m. Wednesday by the Rev. J. M. Hamilton. Interment will be in Rose Hill Cemetery.

With increases ranging as high as 82.2 per cent, seven of 25 tracks belonging to the Thorobred Racing Association are on the plus side in attendance for 1950.

Russia Warned to Keep Out of West Germany

Frankfurt, Germany, Sept. 19 (P)—The United States joined Britain and France today in a warning to Soviet Russia to keep hands off Western Germany.

The three nations moved to end their state of war with Germany and to strengthen her industrially and defensively, but announced that there is no call for recreating a national army in the Western zones.

Any attack upon Berlin or upon Western Germany will be regarded as an attack upon the occupying nations themselves.

This was made clear in a communiqué issued by Secretaries Acheson, Bevin and Schuman after their New York conference. The text was made public here tonight.

The ministers, in their New York session, also decided to:

1. Permit the establishment of mobile police formations organized on a land (state) basis but with provisions which would enable the federal (West German) government to make effective use of all or part of this force in order fully to meet the exigencies of the present situation."

2. Review present prohibitions and limitations on German industries.

3. Remove immediately all restrictions on the size, speed and number of commercial cargo ships built for export.

4. Permit steel to be produced beyond the present limits laid down by the Allies wherever such increased production would "facilitate the defense effort of the west."

New York, Sept. 19 (P)—The foreign ministers of the United States, Britain and France are due to announce today a series of measures for relaxing German occupation controls and increasing Western German security.

No official word is expected for the moment on an American proposal to incorporate German troops into a Western European defense force. But Secretary of State Dean Acheson is convinced that there is fundamental agreement on this point among the foreign minister who compose the North Atlantic council—the Big Three and nine smaller states.

Acheson, whose views became known last night, feels that the western strategy talks—under way here more than a week and now ending their first phase—have been extraordinarily successful despite French objections on the German troop issue.

He considers differences between the United States and France over this issue more apparent than real and believes full agreement on the whole American proposal for creating a single international army to defend Western Europe is inevitable and that Germans will be given an opportunity to participate.

The North Atlantic council wound up its meetings yesterday with an inconclusive communiqué and decision to meet again within two weeks. The official statement said mainly that the council had been discussing the proposed new European army and how to set it up quickly. Now, it said, the foreign ministers in the council must consult their governments on how to put the plan into effect.

As soon as the group of 12 adjourned, Acheson, French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman and British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin resumed their Big Three meeting and reached a number of decisions regarding internal German occupation problems. Their associates said these decisions were tentative until they could be discussed today with the foreign ministers of Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg, and communicated to West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer.

Active pallbearers are: Carter Johnson, Dr. F. D. Henry, Lloyd Spencer, R. L. Broach, Chester Lester, Kline Snyder, Robert Wilson, N. T. Jewell, Terrell Cornelius.

Funeral services will be held at the residence at 320 W. Ave B, at 3 p.m. Wednesday by the Rev. J. M. Hamilton. Interment will be in Rose Hill Cemetery.

1950 Livestock Show Promises to Be the Best

The 1950 Third District Livestock show will be the greatest in history according to show officials. The greatest array of livestock entries in the history of the show is already assured. Attendance records are expected to be broken this the first year that the main gate admission has been free.

Other attractions expected to aid in drawing a big attendance are: The world championship rodeo, being held for the first time under the roof of the show's new $100,000 indoor coliseum; A large carnival and various other attractions arranged by the show committee.

The 1950 show will open with a giant downtown parade starting at 2 p.m. Monday afternoon. Prizes will be awarded to the best horse-rider combinations and to the best entry in the pet section of the parade. The Missouri Pacific Railroad will enter a 65 ft. replica of the Missouri Pacific Eagle in the parade.

The first rodeo performance will be held Monday evening at 8 p.m. in the coliseum. Since the rodeo will be held indoors all performances will be presented rain or shine. The rodeo is again under the direction of Burr Andrews, well known Texan Rodeo promoter. Mr. Andrews has informed the publicity committee that he will bring the wildest and roughest stock this year that he has ever had.

One of the highlights of the 1950 show will be official day Friday September 29. All state, district, county and city officials will be guests of the show. Governor Sid McMath will make an address at the coliseum at 11 a.m. of the day.

Over $5,000 in premium money will be awarded to exhibitors during the show. The public is urged to attend the Third District Livestock show to see one of the top District shows in the state.

No estimate of the cost was attempted, nor was there any timetable.

A bill to set up a federal agency empowered to assist state and local authorities in carrying out the program was promptly introduced in the house by Rep. Durham (D-N.C.) vice chairman of the senate-house atomic energy committee.

Durham said, however, that he did not expect action on it until congress returns—either after a recess or before the November elections or the first of next year.

Senators likewise ruled out any prospects for immediate action, although a number added that civilian defense requires prompt attention.

In the meantime, Mr. Truman said, he intended to set up a temporary civil defense administration to "carry forward" the work until permanent legislation is enacted by congress."

In the senate, the President's message ran into a jurisdictional snag. Vice President Barkley temporarily withheld sending it to a committee because of a dispute in the past between the armed service committee and the atomic energy committee over which of them should handle civilian defense matters.

Christian Church Council Meets

The Women's Council of the First Christian church met Monday afternoon at 3:30 in the Church Parlor, with Mrs. Oliver Adams, president presiding over the business meeting. The meeting was opened with everyone repeating the Lord's prayer, and this was followed by the reading of the reports from the secretary and the treasurer.

The president announced that Circle 1 would call on the sick members of the church and that Circle 2 will call on new members. It was also announced that orders should be placed for the Christmas cards right away, since an order will be sent off soon. Homecoming Day and the Annual meeting for the entire Church was announced for Sunday morning, October 1st. A committee was named to arrange for the noon meal and contact everyone as to what he is to bring for the dinner. A new project was voted on and accepted to sell vanilla in order to get silverware for the church. The president also appointed a committee to serve dinners to the Laymen's League during the coming year, and the first one will be on Wednesday, September 28th.

Following the business session the missionary program was opened with the singing of the hymn "Take Time To Be Holy". Mrs. B. L. Rettig brought the devotional taking as her theme "Fellowship and how it affects our Christian life." Mrs. George Wright gave a very interesting discussion of the third lesson in the study course, and her subject was "A Prophet In His Own Country". In the attendance count, Circle 1 was awarded the president's dollar for having the largest number present. The meeting closed with the Council benediction.

Man Given One to 20 Years for Bombing Plane

Santa Monica, Calif., Sept. 19 — (P) — An aviation engineer, frustrated in a scheme to time-bomb an airliner and collect $25,000 flight insurance on his wife and children is under sentence of one to 20 years in prison today.

John H. Grant, 32, was denied a new trial and denied reduction of $50,000 bail. As he was returned to jail yesterday after sentencing, his attorney gave notice of appeal.

A jury on Aug. 3 convicted Grant on six counts of attempted murder, of his wife, Betty; their children, Marie, six, and Bobby, five, and three crew members of the plane.

No charges were filed involving 13 other passengers aboard the San Diego-bound plane last April 17.

The state said Grant fashioned a bomb of gasoline in a suitcase, set it to explode while the plane was over the ocean and almost succeeded in having the suitcase put aboard. But just before takeoff at Los Angeles International airport, the bomb flared up in the face of a baggage handler. He was slightly burned but no one else was hurt.

Grant testified that he was in debt, nagged by his wife and in love with an airline stewardess. He was beneficiary on the insurance he persuaded his wife to buy before takeoff.

Mrs. Grant obtained a divorce last month and has custody of the children.

FORMER THE MISS FREY

Copyright 1950 by N.E.A. Service, Inc.

STORY: The former Miss Frey whose marriage to Peter Ede has not been ended, in spite of her father's will, is engaged to Fred & Company, a successful advertising agency.

The firm is threatened with the loss of the Morn-Glo soap account, owned in the interest handled by the agency. Mrs. Ede, advertising manager of Morn-Glo, she is told that representatives of other agencies have approached him and that she has been offered a better position than this. Ede calls her staff, including Dan Reagan and his brother Jerry, into a conference.

notable disregard for grammar. "But I feel it, all the same. The guy's a mystery."

"What can we do about him, Dan?"

Reagan shook his head. "Nothing that I can see right now. Could Northcott really do want a fresh advertising slant and nothing else?"

"Well, maybe," Ede was non-committal. "But I couldn't quite make him out. I don't know whether he's for us or again us."

"Better say 'again' till we know different," Reagan said cautiously. He arose and walked restlessly about the room. "Well, it's nearly 5 o'clock, and you'll be wanting to get home. I don't suppose, though . . ." He stopped.

"What don't you suppose, Dan?"

"Well," he muttered finally, "I guess I'll be going, too." The slam of the door behind him was unnecessarily loud.

Ede relaxed and smiled at Reagan. "What are you waiting for, Dan?"

Reagan almost blurted it. "That you'd let me buy you a cocktail?"

She knew that he had nervously asked himself to ask her. Outside of business Dan Reagan, hard-sho-ted Irishman from the wrong side of the tracks, was unaccustomed to mingling in the higher social brackets. She said promptly: "Why not? I think I've earned it after my little bout with Northcott. As a matter of fact, Dan, I'll let you buy me two."

Reagan nodded. "I've suspected it."

"It worried me," she said, her wide, smooth forehead crinkling in a frown. "But Northcott himself worries me more."

"In what way?"

"Well, he intimated that if we could match the ideas—bright ones, he called them—that the others brought in, the business would be safe. But I don't know. I'm beginning to agree with you. Northcott has something cooking. But the funny part is that I can't tell why I feel it."

"Me, neither," said Reagan, with

THE Regent Room was a place of thick blue carpets and countless mirrors. As she entered, Ede had the feeling of stepping into a kind of glittering darkness. But once her eyes became focused, she realized that there was light in the room. But it was subdued light, dim and sooth ing. A tiny bar, with blue-leather and chromium stools, was just off the foyer. And the only music came from a single piano played by a gentleman who seemed barely to touch the keys with the tips of his fingers. In Ede's book, the Regent Room was the most restful cocktail lounge in New York.

DOROTHY DIX

Friendly Partnership

Dear Miss Dix: My husband and I married when we were boy and girl. Now twelve years later we find that we have outgrown our youthful passion, that we are completely out of love with each other and that there is little congeniality between us. Neither one of us would now select the other for a mate. If we had only ourselves to consider we would not hesitate to part, but we have two splendid children who are just coming to the age when they most need a home and a mother and a father, and we do not feel that we have a right to take our happiness at their expense. Besides, we both adore our children. Can two people situated as we are make even a near success of marriage?

MABLE

Answer: Undoubtedly you can. Intelligence is just as much a factor in making a successful marriage as love is. Perhaps, indeed, it goes farther in making a happy marriage than love does because the more emotional a man and woman are the more prone are they to jealousies and quarrels and the various temperamental qualities that are thrilling at

The 1950 Michigan State track team smashed 12 varsity records during the season, seven indoor and five outdoor.

To begin with you have a common interest in your children that insensibly draws you together. You dominant desire is to make them happy and to rear them into being fine men. The man and woman who have bent over a cradle together and watched over a sick baby, and taught a toddler to walk have a tie between them that nothing can ever really break.

As for getting along harmonious ly together that is simply a matter of volition. There is no use in

She and Reagan found a corner table.

After Reagan gave their orders to a deferential waiter, Ede lit a cigarette and leaned back. After a moment, she said, "Suppose we were to try a direct frontal attack on Northcott?"

"How do you mean?"

"Well, simply face him down. Tell him, frankly, that we think it would improve our relations if he'd show us his whole hand."

"You don't actually know that he isn't showing it," Reagan re minded her.

"We don't know. But we're 99 per cent sure. Do you think it would work, Dan, or am I being naive?"

"I wouldn't call it that," Reagan said. "You're not the na ve type. But, after all, you are pretty new to this business. If you did that, Northcott would simply evade you. He'd swear that he was only interested in getting the best advertising job for his product. He'd certainly admit to no ulterior motive, if he has one. No, I think we'll have to find another way of getting at him."

EDE made a gesture of impatience. "And, meanwhile, he's got us on the defensive. He can play along with us and then strike, whenever he wants to."

"That," said Reagan, "is the advertising business. Agencies are always on the defensive because clients like to put them there."

The waiter brought the drinks. Ede was just lifting her glass when there came a slight commotion in the doorway of the Regent Room, and the sound of a light gay laugh. The laugh had a very familiar ring. Ede looked up quickly.

Her sister Jenn was just climbing onto one of the blue-and-chromium stools at the little bar. With her was a tall man whose sleek dark hair was liberally sprinkled with gray. Hamilton Grieve, Ede thought immediately, had developed into the perfect approaching-middle-age-man-about-town.

Reagan noticed Ede's slight start.

"Someone you know?" he asked.

"My kid sister, doing herself no particular good."

Today a Year Ago — Rex Barney of the Brooklyn Dodgers stopped Chicago's Cubs, 4-0, on one hit.

Five Years Ago — Red Barrett hurled his 22nd victory as the St. Louis Cardinals defeated Chicago, 3-2, cutting Cubs' lead to two games. Ten Years Ago — Detroit trounced the Philadelphia Athletics, 13-2 and 10-1, to tie Cleveland for the American League lead.

Fifteen Years Ago — The Chicago Cubs won their 16th straight, defeating Carl Hubbell and the New York Giants, 6 to 1.

Boston Moves

Into Second Place

By MURRAY ROSE

(Associated Press Sportswriter)

The talk was all of "Kinder, Boston Red Sox steamed into Cleveland today for a two-game series with the Indians.

After Cleveland comes the vital two-day set with the Yankees in New York Saturday and Sunday. But the hustlers from Boston weren't looking that far ahead.

"Win 'em today and worry about tomorrow, tomorrow," was the motto of every man from Manager Steve O'Neill down as they looked fondly in the direction of Ellis Kinder.

And well they might. For it was Kinder again who saved the "big one" against Detroit in the ninth yesterday just as he did the day before. On the strength of those great rescues the Red Sox won them both, 3-2, and today rested in second place, a game behind the pace-setting Yanks and a half-length in front of Detroit.

It was the fifth time in the last five days that O'Neill waved the 30-year-old Arkansas native to "come in and stop 'em."

"I wanted to give him the day off," said Steve. "I knew he was tired and I told him he could have the day off."

"No," he says to me, "you might need me. Steve, I think I can work an inning for you."

He did — and what an inning! The Sox had come from behind a 2-1 count to score twice in the ninth for a 3-2 lead.

Rookie Willard Nixon, who had pitched five six-hit ball in a duel with Detroit's Doughty Hal Newhouse, pitched three straight balls to lead-off man Joe Ginsberg. That was all for Nixon, "Bring in Kinder," called O'Neill.

Kinney pumped in two strikes but finally walked Ginsberg. He was the last Tiger to get on. Pinch-hitter Pat Mullin sacrificed but another sun swinger, Charley Keller, popped out and then Gerry Priddy grounded out.

Billy Goodman, Boston's leading hitter, singled to start the winning rally in the ninth. Ted Williams' chopper gave him an infield hit. And when Newhouse threw wild past first, Goodman went to third. Obviously disturbed, Newhouse took a full windup on Vern Stephens and Williams stole second.

Out came Newhouse and in stepped Hal White. White intentionally passed Stephens to load the bases. Walt Dropo singled to score Goodman with the tying run. Bobby Doerr fled deep to center to bring home Williams with the winning run.

Here's the way the three con-

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By Hugh Fullerton, Jr.

South Fallsburg, N. Y., Sept. 19 (ing). You tell him a thing and (P) — "It will be the first time," he remembers it, and he even said Jake Mintz in his intangible practices while he's on the road. When I came here, he was lackadaisical and would move onto the ropes. I told him that's dangerous against Louis and the last few days he's been in the middle of the ring. . . . He has what I think is sincere confidence like Jimmy Braddock, Al McCoy or Buddy Baer, the first time. . . . Buddy wasn't confident the second time, but you gotta remember that when you fought Louis at that time, he left something with you. . . . Charles can move, box and punch; I'd call him a Billy Conn with a punch."

Well, Who Likes To Work?

Further reasoning on the part of Arcel is that Louis, while he may appear to be in perfect shape, certainly can't be any better than when he was two years younger. . . . I've seen a good many fellows who quit fighting and tried to come back," Ray explained. "Of course, Louis never really quit, but exhibitions aren't fighting. . . . They're just a pleasure to watch. When those fellows went through real serious training they looked good, but it seemed to take something out of them. . . . That grind may be hard; maybe it becomes distasteful and when you don't like to do anything, you don't do it well."

Arcel, a dead-pan sort of guy, didn't exactly look hopeful as he let his voice trail off, but he gave the impression that there was more hope than expectation in his mind. . . . Then he added: "One thing is sure, Louis has gotta make this a short fight. . . . I don't say Charles is a greater fighter than Louis was, but if time has taken its toll—".
